The apostle Paul, blinded by the sight of the risen and glorified Jesus while traveling the road to Damascus to imprison Christians, was chosen by God to bear his name before the Gentiles and kings. At left, he declares the gospel of Jesus Christ to Festus, procurator of Judæa, and Agrippa II, king of the Jews.

Today, the Church faces persecution against both the law and the gospel of Jesus Christ. At this year's conference, through inductive Bible studies, sermons and expositions, and workshops and topical discussions, we shall study and reason together about how the Church may, like Paul, confidently stand before the gentiles and kings in the Name of Christ.
